1	EPO	134 th	2022	4559	[I]t is well established in the Tribunal's case law that international organisations are bound to refrain from any type of conduct that may harm the dignity or reputation of their staff members and that the general principle of good faith and the concomitant duty of care require them to treat their staff with due consideration in order to avoid causing them undue injury.	2. The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 1,000 euros	1000
2	EPO	134 th	2022	4558	While an organisation has a duty to correct any mistakes made by an employee in the exercise of her or his right of appeal, it has an even greater duty not to misdirect an employee to the wrong venue by incorrectly telling her or him that a request for review is not the right remedy or that her	2. The Organisation shall also pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 2,500 euro	2500

4	IFAD	134 th	2022	4547	The complainant challenges the decision of the President of IFAD to find her internal complaint of harassment and abuse of authority unfounded.	IFAD shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 10,000 euros.	10000
5	IFAD	134 th	2022	4541	The complainant challenges the decision not to notify her of the outcome of the investigation into her internal complaint of moral harassment, the decision not to send her the full report drawn up following that investigation, and the decision not to inform her of the outcome of her internal complaint. the Tribunal considers that the existence of such injury is apparent from the evidence in the file, the complainant's ensuing health problems and the fact that she felt compelled to re-direct her career. In the circumstances of the case, Tribunal considers it fair to award the complainant moral damages in the amount of 40,000 euro.	2. IFAD shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 40,000 euros	40000
	ITU	134 th	2022	4519	The complainant challenges the decision to suspend her without pay. The sudden and prolonged loss of all pay resulting from that measure was bound to cause the complainant severe anxiety and hardship. Moreover, the unreasonable length of the suspension, considered as a whole, had the effect of keeping the complainant in a protracted state of uncertainty about her professional future, which was especially difficult since she was responsible for a child.	3. ITU shall pay the complainant 15,000 euros in moral damages.	15000

7	ITU	134 th	2022	4518	The complainant challenges his non-appointment to a fixed-term position and the non-renewal of his short-term contract, as well as the organisation's refusal to conduct an investigation into the allegations of harassment made against him which, according to him, form the basis of the non-appointment and non-renewal decisions.	. ITU shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 10,000 United States dollars.	10000
8	ITU	134 th	2022	4515	The complainant challenges the conversion of his suspension with pay into a suspension without pay pending an investigation for harassment undertaken against him. As the complainant has articulated the effects which the decision to convert his suspension with pay into a suspension without pay had on him, and, given the serious hardship that he suffered, which ITU itself acknowledges, he is entitled to moral damages.	4. ITU shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 15,000 Swiss francs.	15000
9	OPCW	134 th	2022	4508	The complainant challenges the decision to reject his claim for compensation for a service-incurred disability.	3. The OPCW shall pay the complainant 5,000 euros moral damages	5000

11	CCC	134 th	2022	4449	The complainant challenges the decision to terminate her appointment following the abolition of her post. Although the Tribunal's case law does not ordinarily place such an obligation on organisations, the WCO's duty of care towards the complainant required, in this case, that it provide her with the necessary information on this point (for a comparable case involving a failure to state the means of redress and applicable time limits in the notification of a decision sent to a former staff member with a serious disability, see Judgment 3012, consideration 6, or, for a case involving failure to provide such information to an elderly former staff member in fragile health affected by a decision significantly reducing the coverage of her costs of residence in a nursing home,	3. 13	EPO	133	2022	4491	The complainant challenges the decision to dismiss her with immediate effect for serious misconduct. [There was] manifest moral damage, involving considerable personal distress, occasioned to the complainant by her being investigated, charged with fraudulent misconduct, found to have engaged in that misconduct and ultimately dismissed. Those moral damages are assessed in the sum of 30,000 euros.	3. The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 30,000 euros.	30000
14	EPO	133	2022	4490	The complainant challenges the amount of damages awarded for the unlawful decision not to renew her fixed-term contract as a Principal Director and to reinstate her in a lower-level post instead. It is tolerably clear from the terms of the complainant's letter of resignation of 29 April 2014 and the contemporaneous medical certificate from her treating physician (the contents of neither, as they related to the effect of events on the complainant, were challenged by the EPO) that the decision to abolish her post and not to renew her Principal Director contract had a serious and negative effect on the	2. The EPO shall pay the complainant 20,000 euros in moral damages.	20000
15	EPO	133	2022	4489	The complainant challenges the amount of moral damages paid to her by the EPO for the decision not to finalise her two performance management reports for 2011 and part of 2012.	. 19	ICC	133	2022	4476	The complainant, who claims to be entitled to whistleblower status and requests the protection afforded thereby, challenges the failure to respond to his letter reporting what he considers to be unlawful by particular Court officials. The Tribunal considers that a request to be granted whistleblower status is inherently urgent and must be examined with particular speed, regardless of its merits, so that the official concerned can receive the protection afforded thereby as quickly as possible should the request prove warranted, or, at the very least, be informed of the decision taken on the matter.	1. The ICC shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 2,000 euros.	2000
20	Eurocontrol	133	2022	4471	The complainant challenges the decision to dismiss his complaint of psychological harassment. The complainant was denied the right to have his harassment complaint dealt with within a reasonable time, to receive an adequate motivation for its dismissal and to have a copy of the preliminary investigation report concerning that complaint provided in a timely and appropriate manner. This has inevitably caused him considerable moral injury which must be redressed (see, concerning acknowledgement of moral injury in such circumstances,	3. Eurocontrol shall pay the complainant 20,000 euros in moral damages	20000
21	IAEA	133	2022	4465	The complainant challenges the decision to cease paying boarding assistance for his son following amendments to the education grant scheme. The IAEA shall pay the complainant 13,000 United States dollars in damages	13000
22	WTO	133	2022	4464	The complainant challenges the WTO's refusal to recognise the illness from which he states he suffers as service-incurred	3. The WTO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 3,000 Swiss francs.	3000

24	IOM	133	2022	4459	The complainant challenges the decision not to defer her transfer, under IOM's policy on rotation, to Sudan until she was able to find adequate medical and schooling facilities for her disabled daughter.	2. IOM shall pay the complainant 10,000 euros in moral damages	10000
25	UNESCO	133	2022	4457	The complainant challenges the decision to summarily dismiss him. The penalty of summary dismissal also caused the complainant obvious moral injury since it seriously damaged his honour and reputation of itself.	4. The Organization shall pay the complainant 40,000 euros in moral damages.	40000

26	WTO	133	2022	4456	The complainant contests the decision to summarily dismiss her for misconduct. UNWTO shall pay the complainant 50,000 euros moral damages	50000
27	WTO	133	2022	4454	The complainant contests the decisions to reject his allegations of misconduct on the part of the Secretary-General. UNWTO shall pay the complainant 10,000 euros moral damages	10000
28	WTO	133	2022	4453	The complainant contests the decision to summarily dismiss him.	UNWTO shall pay the complainant 40,000 euros moral damages.	40000

31	EPO	132	2021	4434	The complainants challenge the refusal to organise a strike ballot under the new rules governing the exercise of the right to strike at the European Patent Office. The complainants are entitled to moral damages for the decision of the President not to hold a ballot for a strike they and others called for in accordance with the provisions of Circular No. 347, which constituted an abuse of power in that the President purported to exercise a power which he did not have. The President's conduct involved a significant and unilateral derogation of the complainants' right to strike even as arising under the materially constraining scheme in Circular No. 347 and CA/D 5/13. These moral damages are assessed in the sum of 6,000 euros for each complainant.	The EPO shall pay each of the complainants 6,000 euros as moral damages. 5 complainants	30000
32	EPO	132	2021	4433	The complainant challenges the decision to treat his participation in a strike as an unauthorised absence. [T]he threat [in question] did involve an attempt to intimidate the complainant, aggravated by the adoption by the EPO of an erroneous interpretation of its own normative legal documents. It involved an attempt to stifle, by threat, the exercise of the lawful right to strike. The complainant is, for this, entitled to moral damages assessed in the sum of 4,000 euros.	The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 4,000 euros.	4000

33	EPO	132	2021	4432	The complainant challenges the decision to accept only part of the recommendations of the Appeals Committee on his appeal against the postponement of a strike ballot by the President of the European Patent Office	The EPO shall pay the complainant 8,000 euros as moral damages,	8000
34	EPO	132	2021	4430	The complainants challenge the new rules governing the exercise of the right to strike at the European Patent Office.	The EPO shall pay each complainant moral damages in the amount of 2,000 euros. 4 complainants	8000
35	EPO	132	2021	4428	The complainant challenges the refusal of her request to combine a half day of absence for strike participation with a half day of leave. The complainant is entitled to an award of moral damages for the unlawfulness of the impugned decision, which amounted to a deliberate violation of the exercise of her right to strike, and the negative effects of this decision, including unequal treatment. The Tribunal assesses these damages in the amount of 5,000 euros.	The EPO shall pay the complainant's heir 5,000 euros in moral damages.
36	EPO	132	2021	4427	The complainant challenges the decision to maintain his transfer to a patent examiner post. The complainant's contention that the decision to transfer him to the examiner's position violated the EPO's duty of care and his dignity is well founded given the indignity and humiliation he suffered by virtue of his transfer from the administrative post that he held for some 16 years to what was, in effect, an entry level examiner's position. The Tribunal has consistently stated, in Judgment 4240, consideration 16, for example, that an organization must carefully take into account the interests and dignity of staff members when effecting a transfer to which the staff member concerned is opposed. It should have been obvious to the EPO that the complainant's responsibilities in the new post were significantly different from those responsibilities which were attached to his previous post and were not objectively comparable with his previous responsibilities. Moreover, there is no evidence to show that the complainant's legitimate objections to the proposed transfer were properly addressed by the Administration before he was transferred.	The EPO shall pay the complainant 50,000 Swiss francs in moral damages	50000
37		132	2021	4425	The complainant impugns the decision to reject her request for reimbursement of the cost of her spa cure as a type A cure undergone for "absolute medical necessity". Her claim for moral damages for the delay in the internal appeal process is however well founded, as a period of almost four years from the filing of the request for review to the issuing of the impugned decision is too long and, additionally, the complainant has provided evidence of the injury (the stress) which that delay caused her. She will therefore be awarded the amount of 2,500 euros in moral damages for the delay in the internal appeal process.	3. The EPO shall pay the complainant 2,500 euros in moral damages for the delay in the internal appeal process.	2500

38	EPO	132	2021	4424	The complainant challenges the outcome of his appeals concerning absences and reduced working hours for medical reasons.	The EPO shall pay the complainant 15,000 euros by way of moral damages.	15000
39	EPO	132	2021	4421	The complainant challenges the deductions made from her remuneration in respect of her absences due to participation in strikes	The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 3,000 euros.	3000

41	FAO	132	2021	4412	The complainant challenges the decisions not to renew her short-term appointment beyond 31 March 2016 and not to select her for a G-3 position advertised through a vacancy announcement.	The FAO shall pay the complainant 20,000 euros in moral damages	20000
42	FAO	132	2021	4411	The complainant challenges the decision to terminate her appointment as a result of the abolition of her post. It is clear that the unexpected notification of the abolition of her post and the termination of her appointment was a serious affront to the complainant's dignity and caused her significant personal harm, for which she is entitled to an award of moral damages.	The FAO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the amount of 30,000 euros	30000
43	ICC	132	2021	4405	The complainant challenges the decisions to abolish her post and terminate her fixed-term appointment. Plainly, the unlawfulness of the abolition of the complainant's position and the subsequent termination of her appointment caused her moral injury. That injury was, in this case, compounded by the complainant's distressing situation following her separation from service, which took place while she was receiving extensive medical treatment of which the ICC had been informed. It was also compounded by the fact that the Court, which has itself acknowledged that it failed in its duty of care in this respect, did not make every effort to "explore with the complainant other employment options before prior to [her] separation".	The Court shall pay those successors 40,000 euros in moral damages	40000
44	EPO	131	2021	4399	The complainant challenges the decision to transfer him from a manager position to a non-managerial post.	The EPO shall pay the complainant 12,000 euros in moral damages	12000

The unlawful summary dismissal of [the] appeals by the [...] final decisions, endorsing the Appeals Committee's recommendation, left the complainants in uncertain and stressful circumstances, thereby entitling them to an award of moral damages.	The EPO shall pay each complainant 7,000 euros in moral damages	7000
47	EPO	131	2021	4385	The complainants are permanent employees of the European Patent Office who challenge a general decision concerning tax adjustment. 68	EPO	129	2020	4262	The complainant challenges her performance management report for 2008	The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the sum of 10,000 euros	10000
69	EPO	129	2020	4261	The complainant challenges the withdrawal of a decision to assign her additional duties on a temporary basis. It is a well-established principle in the Tribunal's case law, as was recently stated in Judgment 4178, consideration 14, citing Judgment 3353, consideration 26, that "[a]n organisation must care for the dignity of its staff members and not cause them unnecessary personal distress and disappointment where this could be avoided". In the present case the complainant, who held a senior position within the EPO, agreed to take on additional duties subject to certain conditions a significant number of which were directed towards relieving her of some of the burdens of doing so. The complainant received unqualified assurances that her conditions concerning support would be met. The fact that she would take on those additional duties was made known widely within the Organisation. It cannot be doubted, in the Tribunal's opinion, that the abandoning of this arrangement because the unqualified assurances could, in fact, not be met would have caused the complainant considerable distress and disappointment, particularly having regard to the fact that the arrangement had been widely publicised within the Organisation. The complainant is entitled to moral damages[.]	The EPO shall pay the complainant moral damages in the sum of 10,000 euros	10000

70	EPO	129	2020	4260	The complainant challenges the EPO's failure to allow her access to her complete medical file and to provide her with a copy thereof in a timely manner	The EPO shall pay the complainant 10,000 euros in moral damages	10000

76	WHO	129	2020	4239	The complainant challenges the decision to terminate her appointment for health reasons and claims that the compensation she received for her service-incurred injury is grossly inadequate. [T]here is a possibility that the breach of WHO's duty of care concerning the complainant when she returned to Geneva has led or contributed to the professional and personal circumstances in which the complainant now finds herself. An inference can readily be drawn that the complainant knows that, had she received appropriate treatment immediately on her return to Geneva, her grave present predicament, arising so early in her adult life, might not have come about and also she believes WHO should have done more to support and help her. It cannot be doubted that these matters have caused and will continue to cause the complainant considerable distress. In the special circumstances of this case, the complainant is entitled to a significant award of moral damages that the Tribunal assesses in the sum of 180,000 United States dollars	WHO shall pay the complainant 180,000 United States dollars by way of moral damages	180000

83	OTIF	129	2020	4215	The complainant challenges the decision not to confirm his appointment at the end of his probation period. As far as moral injury is concerned, the Tribunal considers that the non-confirmation of the complainant's appointment also caused him substantial harm in this respect, particularly inasmuch as it was liable to damage his professional reputation. It might be observed in this regard that the Organisation itself attempted to limit that harm by endeavouring, as stated above, not to cite the complainant's unsatisfactory performance as the official basis for the decision and by sending to his national civil service, at the same time, an appraisal that passed over the criticism of his performance. However, besides the fact that the Tribunal plainly cannot condone such questionable actions, it is highly doubtful that they actually minimised the harm to the complainant's professional reputation. Moreover, the abruptness with which the complainant's appointment was ended, forcing him to leave his duties almost immediately after he was notified of the impugned decision, inevitably caused him distress	OTIF shall pay the complainant 50,000 Swiss francs	50000
